

July 16, 2005

Air Force Brig. Gen. Sue Ellen Turner:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole J. Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

Mr. Samuel Knox Skinner:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M. Steinberg
Carole J. Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

Air Force Gen. Lloyd Newton.

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

Army Gen. James T. Hill:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole M. Steinberg

July 16, 2005

Rep. James V. Hansen:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole J Steinberg

HEAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

Navy Adm. Harold W. Gehman Jr.:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

Mr. Philip Coyle,

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,

David M. Steinberg

David M. Steinberg

Carole J. Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

Rep. James H. Blbray:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received

July 16, 2005

BRAC Chairman Anthony J. Principi:

Virginia Beach is the largest city in the state. It could be a tourist paradise but the noise and danger from the military aircraft will discourage visitors. Many businesses could set up here and many people could build homes, but Oceana takes up an enormous space. Noise from the Superhornets is loud even through the thick walls of the building where I work. I don't want my children's and grandchildren's brains crippled. We could have a pleasant life here if you moved Oceana to a large area that is not in the middle of a city.

Sincerely,
David M. Steinberg

David M Steinberg
Carole J Steinberg

BRAC Commission

JUL 19 2005

Received