

Received
06/13/2005

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate, I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow

June 8, 2005

BRAC Commission
2521 South Clark Street, Suite 600
Arlington, VA 22202

Dear Commission Member:

I am a long time resident of Clovis, New Mexico the home of Cannon Air Force Base. I am a native of this area, I was raised on a farm northwest of Clovis, graduated from High School at Melrose, New Mexico, attended college and received my masters degree from Eastern New Mexico University. For a short time I sold real estate , I worked as a clerk for several years in the Curry County Magistrate Court, and have just recently retired from the Clovis Municipal Schools where I was an elementary school teacher and counselor.

I am married to a retired Air Force Chief Master Sergeant. A little over one year ago we purchased a new home in Clovis with the intent of living here for the rest of our lives. One of the reasons we decided to do so was the convenience and availability of the base facilities. As retirees on a fixed income the savings at the commissary and BX are significant factors to our budget and the nearness of the medical facilities is a primary concern for us.

As you can see, we have a lot of time and money invested in Clovis and were shocked and saddened to hear that Cannon was on the BRAC list for closure. Although we would suffer a great loss if this becomes a reality, there are those who would be devastated. The economic impact to Clovis would be monumental, twice what is predicted for any other base community on the list. Clovis has just begun to see improvement in our economy and growth in industry which results in increased population. The closure of Cannon would impede, stop, and probably reverse this trend. There has already been a marked difference just since the list was made public. Out of state contractors have pulled out and returned home, real estate prices have plummeted, construction has been put on hold, businesses are slowing down, and citizens are holding their breath.

Cannon is not only an integral and essential part of our lives, this community and the surrounding area, it is a vital component of the United States Air Force and the entire military strength of America. No other base can offer the amount of air space with no encroachment, the potential of supersonic training ability, ideal year round flying weather, close proximity of the bombing range, room to expand in all directions, new and upgraded facilities, buildings, and runways just to name a few of the unique assets. All of this is paramount to the mission of the Air Force and the safety and security of the nation.

Please keep in mind that the relationship of the base and the host community cannot be stressed enough. When our military men and women feel comfortable and welcome in a community it makes a big difference in their attitude and their work effort. That is evident in the excellence in performance of the Cannon personnel as atested to by the numerous awards and national recognition they have received. I would ask that each and every member of the commission attend the meeting scheduled in Clovis for June 24th to see for yourselves that the Clovis/Cannon relationship is a symbiotic one in that the community supports the base and the base supports the community. That is the very backbone of our military strength and to lose Cannon would weaken the structure of our military force.

Thank you for taking time to reevaluate and reconsider the value of Cannon Air Force Base on a personal, community, and most importantly the national level. I hope to see each and every one of you in Clovis on June 24th.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bigelow